Synopsis Books:

The Hunting Lodge was all that remained of the proud holdings of the Lairds of Glendarroch. Built by Queen Victoria, it is now the home of Dr. Calum MacRaven, last Laird...who must stand and watch as Beth Ryan, a stranger from London, offer the Glendarroch lands to public sale. But more than one watcher resents the presence of the beautiful and famous Beth Ryan...and someone seems determined to stop this final destruction of the once-great estates by any means - including love and/or murder! Soon Beth, seeking to escape from her fame, falls in love with Calum...to find that she must share his love with a dead woman - and with something else, something that might be only a legend...or a living creature cast out from hell!

Alanna Knight's award-winning first novel, 'Legend of the Loch' was published in 1969 and this year she celebrates the landmark publication of her 50th book, her latest in the Inspector Faro series, 'The Final Enemy'. Novelist, playwright and biographer, her work includes gothic and historical novels and crime fiction, as well as her notable non-fiction works on Robert Louis Stevenson. Born in Tyneside of Scots-Irish parentage, she now lives and writes in Edinburgh, the city which inspired her popular and widely-acclaimed series of books:

The Inspector Faro Series.

Speaking about her reasons for being drawn to the world of historical crime, Alanna explains: "It was the puzzles. History is full of riddles and mysteries, and the researcher has to figure them out, especially if one wants to write a book. I love such puzzles, and I wanted to write some myself."

A founder member of the Scottish Association of Writers; Aberdeen Writers' Circle; Hon. President of the Edinburgh Writers' Club; she is Convener of the Scottish Chapter of the Crime Writers' Association; she is a member of the Society of Authors in Scotland and the Mystery Writers of America. She has been involved over the years in helping other writers get into print: lecturing in creative writing as well as writing articles and books on the subject and adjudicating competitions.
