Synopsis Books:

Family is not our greatest success story, but it could be. Anne Mueller, the mother of a runaway daughter, carefully closets her pain and confusion only to watch it resurface when a thirteen-year-old neighbor child shows up at her door. Desperate to keep this child from the same fate, Anne realizes she must stop living in denial and start questioning conventional wisdom. Her resolve directs her to the resources offered by her wilderness environment: a Centuries-old harmony modeled by her Cree Native friends; the natural peace and balance of the Boreal forest; and the latent caring concern of her tiny wilderness community. The forest, however, provides the ultimate incentive. It pits Anne against her greatest fear, evoking a commitment to do whatever it takes to bring her child home. Thought-provoking and brimming with the wildness of this place, this is an adventure story on many levels
